

ALFALFA MEAL

Better and Cheaper Than Bran

Try a sack for your horse or cow. Alfalfa meal is a great milk producer and by its use you can eliminate expensive hay and use rough fodder, stover, sorghum hay or millet. The meal gives the strong nutriment, the rough feed the filler.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, WHO GIVES $1,000,000 TO STAMP OUT HOOKWORM; SCIENTIST WHO WILL AID IN WORK.

John D. Rockefeller has been so impressed by reading about the hookworm disease recently that he has contributed $1,000,000 as a fund to stamp out the malady and has appointed a committee of eminent scientists to carry on the fight. Chief among those designated by Mr. Rockefeller are Dr. William H. Welch of Baltimore, president of the American Medical Association, and Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research in New York. Most of the work and the experiments in seeking out remedies with which to combat the disease will be carried on at the Rockefeller Institute. Mr. Rockefeller sent letters to a dozen or more scientists asking them to meet him in his New York office to discuss the undertaking. The hookworm has been called flippantly the "lazy bug." It makes men lazy because it makes them unfit for work. It is a microscopic worm, a parasite, which originates in polluted soil and enters the human body through the pores of the naked feet of farm laborers or is swallowed with food taken from mud stained hands.

THE HOOK WORM COMMISSION

Provided for by Rockefeller's Gift of $1,000,000.

New York, Nov. 2.—The importance of the hook worm was brought direct to the attention of the public through John D. Rockefeller's gift of $1,000,000 to fight this disease.

It was only a few months ago that the public looked upon the hook worm as a myth and no end of jokes were made out of that form of laziness which is now analyzed as a disease. The commission as appointed by Mr. Rockefeller is composed of men of national and international reputation in their chosen field of activities and it is certain that if there is any remedy for the plague in the south lands this commission will find it and successfully fight the disease. The commission selected includes the following:

Dr. William H. Welch, professor of pathology in Johns Hopkins university, president of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research.

Dr. Charles W. Siles, chief of the division of zoology, United States public health and marine hospital service, and discoverer of the American species of hook worm and the prevalence of the disease in America.

Dr. Edward A. Alderman, president of the University of Virginia.

Dr. David F. Houston, chancellor of Washington University, St. Louis, Mo.

Prof. F. P. Claxton, professor of education in the University of Tennessee.

J. Y. Joyner, state superintendent of education in North Carolina and president of the National Educational Association.

Walter H. Page, editor of the World's Work.

Dr. H. B. Frissell, principal Hampton Institute.

Frederick T. Gates, one of Mr. Rockefeller's business managers.

Starr J. Murphy, Mr. Rockefeller's counsel in benevolent matters.

Meanwhile Robinson's employer is trying to locate him to put him to work. Mrs. Robinson thinks he has gone to Kansas City.

IN HEART OF DIXIE

President Taft Visits Home of Jacob M. Dickinson

And Takes the Secretary of War With Him.

POINTS TO JEFF DAVIS

As One of Mississippi's Heroes, in Speech at Jackson.

Sees Color Line Drawn Everywhere He Stops.

Columbus, Miss., Nov. 2.—President Taft received a joyous welcome today when he came to visit the birthplace of Secretary of War Dickinson and brought the secretary with him.

Mr. Taft held a reception at the old home of General Stephen D. Lee of the confederate forces as the guest of the son of the house, Blewett H. Lee. Later he made an address from a stand erected on Main street and before leaving at 2:20 p. m. for Birmingham, attended his first barbecue of the trip at the Girls' industrial school.

The president took occasion here to pay tribute to Secretary Dickinson. In fact ever since he has entered Mississippi, Mr. Taft has lost no opportunity to give evidence of his high regard for the secretary of war. In the course of his midnight speech at Jackson last night, the president said of Secretary Dickinson:

"Now, I have got 'Mack' Dickinson in the cabinet. He did not come because he wanted to. He came because he knew why I wanted him."

"I wanted him because I wanted to give an earnest example to the south of the truth of my declaration that I was anxious to bring you closer to the government at Washington and I also took him because I wanted one of the ablest men in the country. I wanted that Panama canal built and I knew if he took hold of it, it would go."

Calls Jeff Davis a Hero.

"One of your great heroes of Mississippi is Jefferson Davis, and I am glad the administration at Washington has wiped out the evidence of that extreme partisan bitterness of Cabin John John Bridge, and that his name is restored there, and I am glad because I know and can testify from my experience in the south that the same joy that they experienced at that act on the part of the administration is the joy of a common country and loyalty to a common flag."

"I can not pass from these walls without testifying to the gratitude I feel toward all of Mississippi for this most cordial welcome. I am glad to believe that you would cordially receive the president of the United States under any circumstances, but I am glad to believe your reception is in some degree warmer because you believe I value that reception most highly as an evidence that we are coming closer and closer together and that we are one country, with the same ideals, the same aspirations and the same determination to make us all better and to raise the standard of our citizenship beyond anything that heretofore has been seen."

Color Line Is Drawn.

Enroute to Columbus today the president made brief car end speeches at Kosciusko, Akerman, Starkville and West Point. At each place he was greeted by an enthusiastic throng, the negroes being drawn up on one side of the track and the whites on the other.

At Kosciusko the president gave further evidence of his desire to bring the people of the south closer to the other states.

"I have been glad to be here, because I think this state, as nearly as any, represents the opinion and types of the south and I am anxious to come as closely in contact with the southern people and explain to them as sincerely and sympathetically as I can, my desire to unite them and bring them closer to all the other states."

"I am glad to say that at Vicksburg, at Natchez, at Jackson last night and now, today I have that cordial reception that makes me think they are willing to come more than half way in the encouragement of that sentiment."

"It is not that we want to make you Republicans, or that we want to become Democrats, we all have our views and our taste in that regard, but it is that we shall bring you and that you shall come to believe that you are as near to the heart of the central government as now administered as any other people in the union."

"Well, let 'em stand outside," said Former Governor Francis of Missouri. "They will be able to stand in the corridors."

The convention agreed with Francis, and the 500 will journey to Washington on December 8.

A chic model is this, something on the order of a turban, but with roll of brim faced with black moire. The huge crown is of heavy blue velvet, while the trimming is extremely simple, consisting of two jet headed pins passing through the brim and two long heron feathers on the left side. The richness and beauty of the millinery of the present season is beyond estimate. Brocaded silks, silver and gold laces and many furs are used. An especially popular trimming is the dull, soft moire, used as above, and for full draped crowns.
